JEWISH TEACHER OF NOTE TO LECTURE

Judaism is to be his subject. Before 8:30 p. m. at the El Paso Public Library Monday.

Dr. Gottard Deutsch, Ph. D., professor of history in the Hebrew Union college at Cincinnati, will address El Pasoans on "Judaism: Its Aspects and Prospects," next Monday night. The address will be under the auspices of the El Paso Public Library. The lecture will be given in the First Christian church, beginning at 8 p. m. The general public will be welcomed. There will be no charge at the door and there will be no collection after the lecture. This is simply a small contribution of El Paso to the cultural development of the city. Dr. Deutsch is professor of history at the rabbinical seminary at Cincinnati, a teacher of rabbi Zionka of this city and a student with an international reputation. The London English Jewish Chronicle lately said of him: "Since the death of the last of the German-Jewish historians, Dr.
 Deutsch has ranked as one of the first if not the first of living students of the subject."

The program incident to the lecture will be as follows:
 1. Opening remarks.
 2. Violin solo, "Romance, Simple Aveu." Phone—Master Emil Silberberg, accompanist Mrs. A. Silberberg.
 3. "El Paso and the El Paso Public Library." Martin Zionka.
 4. Piano solo, selected—Miss Stolaroff.
 5. "Judaism: Its Aspects and Prospects"—Dr. G. Deutsch.
 6. Vocal solo, "Bedouin Love Song," Pincuti—Harry Rosenstain; accompanist, Miss Stolaroff.
 7. Closing remarks.

CALIFORNIA PRACHER ELIDES WATCHERS AND DISAPPEARS.
 Richmond, Calif., Jan. 17.—Although police surrounded the personage of the Rev. Frank Horn and kept a watch on the First Baptist church adjoining, in the belief of which he was found hiding, the clergyman succeeded in eluding his watchers and again disappeared. Service in divorce proceedings filed against him by Mrs. May de Tovrea, who says she is his wife, was made January 12.

 Mr. Horn attributes his troubles to a case of mistaken identity asserting that his wayward twin brother is the man sought. Mrs. de Tovrea, however, says there can be no doubt that he is her husband, and when the police's study was searched she identified numerous articles as belonging to her.

Letters and other documents relating to her husband's escapades in Oregon were turned over to the police by Mrs. de Tovrea. They reveal that he was arrested and tried for an attack upon two young women, but acquitted on a technicality, that he was accused of having forged credentials as a Methodist clergyman, and that he fled from Oregon while inquiry was being made.

His Stomach Troubles Over.
 Mr. Dyspeptic, would you not like to feel that your stomach troubles were over, that you could eat any kind of food you desired without injury? That may seem so unlikely to you that you do not even hope for an ending of your trouble, but permit us to assure you that it is not altogether impossible. If others can be cured permanently, and thousands have been, why not you?
 John R. Barker, of Battle Creek, Mich., is one of them. He says, "I was troubled with heartburn, indigestion, and liver complaint until I used Chamberlain's Tablets, then my trouble was over." Sold by all dealers.—Adv.

CHINESE WILL BUILD MODERN CITY AT CANTON.
 San Francisco, Calif., Jan. 17.—Old Canton must go. This is the decree of "Young China." Instead of the evil smelling, unsanitary, cramped congregation of hovels and one-story houses, there will rise En-Ho-Nan island, opposite the "old town," a modern city, built with wide streets, sanitary sewage systems and a municipal bond, or water front.
 These ambitious plans of the new republican regime were brought here by R. C. Johnson, chief engineer of the Canton board of public works. Fiscal representative of the republican provincial government of Canton, member of the American Railway Engineers association and one of the four Chinese members of the American Society of Engineers.

The Husband Question The Widow Feels Considerably Bet- ter When She Learns of the Arrival of Young Maynard.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

AFTER what seemed a long while to the lonely invalid as she lay trying to find forgetfulness in her book, she heard Mary come out of the children's room and proceed to the kitchen, whence she emerged a little later bearing a nice little squash that she had just picked up. She set down on the chair at Beatrice's bedside. The sick woman made a grimace of protest.
 "Sure, ma'am, it will do you good to eat a bit of supper," urged the maid.
 "I've cooked a nice little squash that Mrs. Robbins sent over, and I've made you a little salad such as you like. Eat something, and you'll feel better." To her own surprise Beatrice did feel better when she had partaken of the dainty supper the kind-hearted girl had prepared. But when she was alone again she found herself still dreading the meeting with Henry Blanchard which she felt was inevitable. Suddenly, as she lay moodily thinking, she heard the crunch of gravel on the walk and a moment later the low murmur of a masculine voice at the kitchen door.
 "Perhaps one of the men from the village has come up to see Mary," she mused. Well, if he makes her contented in the country, I don't care.
 But she learned her mistake as to the identity of the masculine visitor when, a moment later, she saw him pushed open softly and Mary entered, bearing a huge hamper of fruit.
 "What a beautiful hamper!" she exclaimed, as she looked at it.
 "He wouldn't come to the front door for fear of disturbing you. And he left this for you."

A Basket of Fruit.
 The basket was so large that it was with difficulty that Mary lifted it to the table at Beatrice's side. "Sure, ma'am, ain't they grand!" she exclaimed, enthusiastically.
 Dusky plums, great hothouse grapes, peaches, nectarines and apricots shone in the lamplight. On top of them was Paul Maynard's card on which he had written:
 "To offset the harshness of the doctor, who says you are ill."
 "Mr. Maynard says he'll call again in the morning," reported the maid.
 Beatrice awoke the following morning more normal in body and mind.
 When Helen, after seeing John Bobbins to the train, came in to see the widow, her friend smiled brightly and said that she was "almost well."

"Uncle Henry went to the city today," announced Helen, apropos of nothing.
 "Then I really think I feel well enough to get up!" remarked Beatrice, demurely.
 "I thought you would," was Helen's dry response, whereat both women smiled mischievously.
 "But I don't dare get up," regretted Beatrice, "unless Dr. Haynes says I may. He was as cross as a bear the last time I disobeyed him. And when he saw me last, he told me I was to lie still until I heard from him again."
 "Then I'll telephone to New York to him," suggested Helen, briskly. "That will give him a chance to grant you his august permission." Accordingly she called up the physician and after a minute of conversation reappeared in the widow's room.

 "Dr. Haynes wants to speak to you at the phone," she said. "He says to be sure, put on a wrapper and slippers, dear."
 Beatrice did as she was told and made her way cautiously to the hall where the telephone was. Her knees were a little unsteady, but otherwise she had no uncomfortable sensations.
 If she had expected any tender solitude from her medical adviser she was mistaken, for he spoke to the point with professional brevity.
 "How is your head, Mrs. Minor?" he asked.
 "Oh, it's quite all right, doctor," Beatrice assured him. "I had a good night's sleep and I feel very easy. Please let me get up. I get so depressed lying in bed all day."
 "I'll take you very much to heart, and will do nothing imprudent, there is no reason for your staying in bed, of course.
 But do take things easy for a day or two. You know you have been a quite ill woman."

"You have nothing to thank me for," promised the widow. Then, as an after thought, she added: "I want to thank you, doctor, for your very great kindness to me."
 "You have nothing to thank me for,"
 Mrs. Minor said the man, earnestly.
 "It is always a pleasure and privilege for me to serve you in any way. I shall hope to see you again soon. I shall be out in Pleasanton before long."

Paul Maynard Calls.
 Beatrice returned to her room, pleased and surprised at the physician's sudden courtesy. He never even asked about Jean, as he always used to do, she thought, amusedly. Then, when Helen had helped her put on a nightgown, she had her easy chair placed on the veranda and ate her breakfast there. When Helen had gone home, she remained on the porch and gazed happily at the hills.
 She started at the roar of a car on the driveway, and saw Paul Maynard speeding up the hill toward her. The big car slid up to the steps and stopped and the driver sprang out and hastened toward her.
 "You are a sight for weary eyes!" he exclaimed, as he took her hand and pressed it. "Here was I expecting to get, at best, only a second-hand report of your condition, and instead of that I find your own sweet self out getting some of God's life-giving fresh air."
 "I am much better," said the widow, smiling up at him. She was conscious again of the thrill of pleasure that his presence always gave her. "I think," she continued, "that the gorgeous fruit you sent me had much to do with my rapid improvement."

"It surely does you credit," affirmed the widow.
 Paul Maynard flung himself into a chair beside her. Beatrice noticed that he looked worn and tired. There was a weary expression about his eyes, and his mouth was set in hard lines when he was not smiling.
 "You don't look so very well yourself," she remarked. "What have you been doing since I saw you last?"
 "Worrying about you," he replied banteringly. "But, that enough to make me look tired?"
 "Did you have a pleasant trip?" asked Beatrice, idly.
 "No, I didn't," was the brusque reply. "I didn't expect to."
 And, as he spoke, the woman saw an expression on his face that decided her to talk of less intimate matters.

CONSUMPTIVES HELPED BY

TUBERCULOSIS MEDICINE
 It is folly to believe that Consumption differs from every other disease in not requiring the use of any medicine for its treatment. For a number of years an enormous mass of voluntary and thankful testimonials from persons who consider that they owe their lives to Eckman's Alternative medicine for Tuberculosis, has been accumulating. Surely plenty of time to demonstrate its lasting value. You write to any of them. Here is one:

5332 Girard Ave., Phila., Pa.
 "Gentlemen: In the winter of 1902 I had an attack of Grippe, followed by Pneumonia and later by Consumption. I grew steadily worse. In the winter of 1904 I had cough, night sweats, fever and rapid quantities of awful-looking stuff and later I had many hemorrhages; at one time three eggs became so distasteful I could keep nothing down. Three physicians treated me. I was ordered to the mountains, but did not go. Eckman's Alternative was recommended by a friend. After taking a small quantity I had the first quiet night's sleep for weeks. My improvement was marked from the first. I gained strength and weight and appetite. I never had another hemorrhage and my cough gradually lessened until entirely gone. I am perfectly well. Every thing I say here can be verified by my family and friends."

(Sworn affidavit.)

 Eckman's Alternative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. For Tucumcari, N. M., Jan. 17.—M. Mortensen, of Houston, Texas, is in this city negotiating with the business men and others with a view to establishing a creamery and butter factory at this point. Mr. Mortensen agrees to furnish sufficient funds with which to finance the business, provided that assistance is given him toward securing a sufficient number of milk cows to supply the factory.

 The least number of cows deemed sufficient for a start is said to be 200, and with a view to obtaining this number a committee was named, with C. C.
 Chapman chairman.

CROSS OR FEVERISH HALF-SICK CHILDREN

Mean their bowels are waste-clogged; liver sluggish and stomach sour.

Your child isn't naturally cross, irritable and peevish. Mother! Examine the tongue; if coated, it means the little one's stomach is disordered, liver inactive and its thirty feet of bowels clogged with foul, decaying waste.
 Every mother knows that a child the ideal laxative and physic for children. Nothing else regulates the little one's tender stomach, liver and bowels so effectively, besides their dear little its delightful fig taste.
 For constipation, bowels sluggish, liver cross, feverishness, diarrhoea, sore throat, bad breath or to break a cold, give one-half to a teaspoonful of "Fig Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged up waste, sour bile, undig-ested food and constipated matter will gently move on and out of the system without griping or nausea, and your child again happy, healthy and smiling child again shortly.
 With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of laxative figs, senna and alicia; it cannot be harmful.
 Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.
 Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, generally old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.—Advertisement.
